—Eileen McClure Photo

DEERFIELD—Miss Ann Burton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Marsden Burton of Alumni Avenue, Providence was married this afternoon in Central Congregational Church, Providence, to Allen Keep Chase, son of Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Thurston Chase of Eaglebrook School and Chase's Chañce, Pocasset.

Rev. Arthur H. Bradford, D.D., of Jaffrey, N.H., minister emeritus of Central Congregational Church, officiated at the 4 p.m. ceremony.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was attired in a gown of white Swiss organdy designed with a fitted bodice accented with organdy flowers and a full skirt-en-train. Her fingertip veil of illusion fell from a headdress of heirloom rose-point lace. She carried feathered carnations and stephanotis.

Mohawk Trail Survey Indicates State Throughway Would Help

CHARLEMONT—While final officers are sure of it that figures will not be released until the Sept. 8 meeting of the Mohawk and Taconic Trail Association here, a preliminary survey report made today indicates that the proposed Massachusetts Throughway may be a blessing in disguise for business on Route 2.

The Maine Turnpike, one of six new Throughways surveyed by the MTA, is typical of them all, association officers reported. While total through traffic from Portsmouth to Portland has tripled in three years, old Route 1, the scenic shore route has lost less than 20 per cent in traffic and most of this loss is in trucks, commercial cars and Maine residents.

Quoting one Maine resident's reaction to the Turnpike, the survey reports, "While my Portland and East shore friends have gained most from the Throughway, I've also profited. Our business is better because a lot more people can come into the region via faster roads and as the traffic on Route 1 is slower and more leisurely more people stop. There are no more big traffic tie-ups and fewer big trucks to irritate visitors."

The New Jersey Turnpike already carrying twice as many as previously estimated, has had the least effect on secondary road traffic the report states.

The Pennsylvania turnpike, opened in 1940, has had the greatest effect. Trail Association officials believe that the principle reasons for this are the lack of promotion and the dirt of worthwhile places on the secondary roads near the Turnpike.

"When It's NEW ... It's HERE"

Your America Day-by-Day

THE DELAWARE, which succeeded the Merrimack as the principal industrial river of the nation, might as appropriately have been called the Hudson River. Henry Hudson discovered Delaware Bay, Aug. 28, 1609, and proceeded to explore the Delaware River before he reached New York Bay and the river named for him. The man for whom the Delaware was named, Lord de la Warr, never saw it. It bears his name because of Capt. Samuel Argall, who reached it in August 1610 during a mysterious voyage. De la Warr, having arrived in Virginia to find most of the colonists starving, sent Argall to Bermuda for a load of hogs. But Argall sailed instead to New England. He returned to Jamestown with a cargo of fish and news he'd named a new cape for Gov. De la Warr, which may or may not have pleased the governor under the circumstances. The governor's name was subsequently transferred to the adjacent bay and river. The Indian tribe predominant in the valley, who called themselves the Leni-Lanape, were subsequently called the Delaware, in a reversal of common river nomenclature in this country. Many of the great rivers have Indian-derived names.
