Diplomats Term Anglo American Dispute Most Serious Since Start of Korean War

London, Aug. 25 (AP)—Prime Minister Winston Churchill met today with his cabinet in an emergency session designed to prevent a quarrel with the United States over India's presence at the Korean peace conference from becoming a disastrous western split.

Diplomats here said the Anglo-American differences arising from the dispute are the most serious since the start of the Korean war. India wants to sit in as a member of the political conference which will attempt to settle Korea's future and which might be widened to include other Far Eastern problems.

Britain feels she should. The United States disagrees and if South Koreans have threatened boycott the conference entirely India is seated.

Concerned Over Controversy—Informed sources reported that Churchill has become serious concerned, because the Anglo-American alliance is the basis
