users of mankind and there they saw the citizenry of tomorrow at play and some of them guests of the settlement houses of Boston. The Rotarians found what makes such a worthwhile thing click, and they turned their eyes and thoughts of giving some assistance and encouragement to the future of this benefaction.

The huge farmhouse and appended buildings provide dormitories and dining rooms for the youngsters and the spacious acreage which makes up the farm gives wide open spaces for games and sports and best of all, an opportunity to breathe in good fresh country air.

After a delicious dinner, the Rotarians were treated to some superb youthful talent as these youngsters from the sidewalks of the Metropolis entertained, with songs and recitations. The Rotary Club members then had the honor and utility of the youngsters who acted as guides and directed a Cook's tour of the Farm and surroundings. The various features of the summer vacation area enjoyed by these youths free of charge were pointed out and described.

The Winchester Rotary Club has already become a benefactor
